Harvest Update

June 3, 2015

PSW ALFALFA

We are seeing quality vary in the Pacific Southwest ranging from top quality dairy to low end feeder hay. Pricing on domestic dairy as well as export continues to be stronger than expected due to untimely showers limiting green hay.

As we move into the hot summer growing conditions, we will continue to see limited volumes of higher end hay and more economy and feeder. Growers in Utah, Nevada, and Idaho will begin cutting over the next week.

PNW ALFALFA

First cutting Alfalfa premium has been severely impacted by weather. There will be a very limited amount of premium grade to offer. We are seeing limited inventories of non-testing #1 grade, with pricing stronger than expected due to the challenging weather.

PNW TIMOTHY

With temperatures reaching 100° F and some stands beginning to lay over, we should see growers aggressively cutting over the next week in both the Kittitas Valley and Columbia Basin. The weather window looks favorable over the next 10 days. We expect to see a range in qualities of Timothy depending on how growers are able to mitigate the hot weather.
