Harvest Update

June 8, 2016

ALFALFA

Growers in New Mexico are expecting to finish 1st cutting Alfalfa at the end of the week. Weather has been favorable for this cutting, and quality is good.

In Utah, Alfalfa is looking good with bright green color and good leaf retention. There is a chance of showers over the weekend, so growers are working hard to finish cutting and baling over the next couple of days.

Thunderstorms over the weekend and into this week have challenged growers in Oregon to put up high quality export hay. Weather has been challenging in the Pacific Northwest where thunderstorms slowed harvest last weekend for growers in Oregon. Some Alfalfa was baled prior to the weather, which is of high quality. Export hay is limited from 1st cutting in the Kittitas Valley and Columbia Basin due to weather challenges. Second cutting has begun in some areas of the Columbia Basin.

Fourth cutting is underway in the Pacific Southwest. High temperatures and moderate winds are making it somewhat challenging to put up top quality hay.

TIMOTHY

Quality looks good at this time, and farmers in the Pacific Northwest are using this weather window to their advantage as the chance of precipitation increases towards the weekend.

STRAW

Harvest is expected to begin in the next two to three weeks, depending on weather conditions.
