Harvest Update

September 9, 2015

ALFALFA

In the Pacific Northwest, 4th cutting Alfalfa harvest efforts have slowed due to the cooler weather in the last week. Quality continues to hold with good green color overall.

Growers in New Mexico were able to resume 3rd cutting Alfalfa harvest, and are expecting completion in the next 7-10 days. In Utah, farmers are trying to finish baling their 3rd cutting harvest ahead of expected showers in the next week. A few growers were able to begin 4th cutting harvest during the good cutting window.

Weather in Klamath Falls and Christmas Valley continues to be favorable and 3rd cutting harvest is in full swing. Quality is fair for Klamath Falls, and looks good in Christmas Valley. A 4th cutting is expected to start in the middle of the month.

Monsoon season continues in the Pacific Southwest, and growers are still fighting to find good cutting windows. Export quality is somewhat limited due to the weather.

TIMOTHY

In the Kittitas Valley, 2nd cutting Timothy harvest is wrapping up. Rain showers earlier in the week slowed harvest, but growers were able to resume mid-week. Quality continues to be good despite the recent precipitation.
